Three Suites

The first suite is for the solo line; flute or violin would be ideal. The movements are marked Running, Singing and Dancing. On recorder, the first and last movements lie within the range of the alto recorder, and the second movement can be played as is on the tenor; however, the recorder player may prefer to play it transposed up five semitones on the alto, which usually has a far sweeter melodic tone. On wind instruments, unmarked breaths will be needed. In some places, if the player prefers, quavers can even be omitted; a quaver that repeats a recent note should be chosen. On the piano, this suite can be played one octave down by the right hand alone, or evenly divided between the hands. Versions are also available one octave down in the alto clef, for viola, and two octaves down in the bass clef, for cello, or left-handed piano, and eight semitones down for the guitar.

The second suite is for piano alone. The movements are marked Turbulent, Calm and Luminous. The first movement almost lies within four octaves and can be played on other keyboards, for example a harpsichord; in the second and third movements the composer was tempted by the extra compass and sustain of the piano.

The third suite is for piano and a solo line; again, flute or violin would be ideal. The notes do lie within the compass of the alto recorder, but the execution would be difficult on that instrument. The movements are marked Fluent, Broad and Wild.

For the Solo Line

Running

The musical score for 'Running' is written in treble clef and consists of 23 measures. The piece is characterized by a complex, rhythmic solo line with frequent changes in time signature and a variety of accidentals. The time signatures used are 14/8, 20/8, 22/8, 18/8, 14/8, 22/8, 18/8, 14/8, 23/8, 18/8, and 16/8. The key signature is primarily one sharp (F#), with several flats (Bb, Eb) and naturals (F, C) interspersed throughout the piece. The notation includes eighth and sixteenth notes, rests, and dynamic markings such as accents and slurs. Measure numbers 5, 10, 15, and 20 are clearly marked at the beginning of their respective lines.
